

Attain Chief Architect To Participate In Stifel Nicolaus Capital Markets Analyst Call

Attain's Andrew Gastwirth Maps The Cloud Landscape – Barriers, Opportunities and Convergence

VIENNA, VA – May 17, 2011 – Attain, LLC, a leading public sector professional services company, today announces that Attain Chief Architect Andrew Gastwirth will participate as a guest speaker on Stifel Nicolaus Capital Markets' analyst call, Cloud Computing Trends in the Federal Government, to be held Thursday, May 19, at 10:30 a.m.

Mr. Gastwirth will lead a discussion about the rapidly evolving cloud computing market, including its barriers to entry, emerging opportunities and convergence in the public and commercial arenas for a group of government IT services research analysts and fund managers. The call will be moderated by Stifel Nicolaus Managing Director Bill Loomis, CFA, who covers the government technology services industry.

Mr. Gastwirth has 20 years of experience as an enterprise architect and strategy executive. He is a thought leader in the Cloud Computing, Identity and Access Management, and Unified Communications fields. As Attain's Chief Architect and Deputy Chief Technology Officer, Mr. Gastwirth is responsible for solution and service line development, evaluating emerging technologies, and providing strategic support to government and corporate CIOs on critical programs. He previously served as the lead capture and strategy executive of Unisys Corporation's Federal division.

Mr. Gastwirth is currently acting as the lead architect and program manager for the first Federal cloud-based messaging and collaboration system, which supports 120,000 end users at a large Federal Government agency. He is also serving on industry organization TechAmerica's Cloud² Commission, which supports the maturation of cloud computing within the Federal Government.
