Professional Services Company Awarded NIH's Chief Information Officer - Solutions and Partners 3 Contract

VIENNA, VA – July 17, 2012 – Attain, LLC, a leading public sector professional services company, today announced that it has won one of the largest and most strategic contracting vehicles in the Federal market to support the National Institutes of Health Information Technology Acquisition and Assessment Center (NITAAC) Chief Information Officer-Solutions and Partners 3 (CIO-SP3) program. CIO-SP3 is a Federal government-wide indefinite-delivery / indefinite-quantity (IDIQ) contract with a ceiling value of up to $20 billion over 10 years.

Through CIO-SP3, Department of Defense and civilian agencies can purchase a wide range of services across 10 task areas to meet health, scientific, administrative, operational, managerial, and information management requirements. The goal of the contract is to provide government agencies the ability to quickly solicit and purchase needed IT solutions and services at reasonable prices.

“We are pleased to support NIH and other agencies with high-quality, cost-effective solutions through CIO-SP3,” said Greg Baroni, chairman and CEO of Attain. “Our award of this critical vehicle is an important milestone for Attain as we continue to increase opportunities to innovatively serve the Federal market, and we are proud to be one of a very select group of small businesses to be chosen in all 10 functional categories.”

As a prime contractor, Attain will provide IT services including biomedical research, health sciences, and healthcare; chief information officer (CIO) support; imaging; outsourcing; IT operations and maintenance; integration services; critical infrastructure protection and information assurance; digital government; enterprise management systems; and software development.

“CIO-SP3 will become Attain’s vehicle of choice to serve our clients in the Federal marketplace,” said Manish Agarwal, president of Attain Federal and Solution Services. “Participation on this contract provides Attain and its team members a vehicle through which to help government agencies meet the challenges of our country’s changing healthcare, technology, security, and budget landscapes.”
